NEWHOMES

Lessons learned from a condo conversion in Newmarket

T seems only fitting that on the day after Labour Day, and for many the first day back to school, that I would visit a condo site that was once a school.

So, on this day, I had a look at The King George School Lofts & Town Homes project in Newmarket.

Having visited a number of 'condo conversion' projects over the years — where an existing heritage building like a church or school is turned into a place where people live — 1 know it can be difficult.

I've had more than one developer of these type of projects tell me it would have been a lot easier (and much less expensive) to demo the thing and build from scratch.

Having said that, these beautiful buildings are worth preserving — the King George School had been declared surplus by the local school board — even if deemed no longer suitable for their original use.

When complete, The King George project will consist of 11 loft units in the school and 14 surrounding townhomes.

Highlights of the loft units include 13' foot ceilings, modern finishes and large windows.

It is about 60 per cent sold, with renovation scheduled to be completed by Sep tember 2019. (Townhomes
 $1,150,000 - $1,350,000, Lofts:
 $540,990 - $998,990.)

My tour of the site is led by Shoshana Levstein, project manager for Rose Corporation, a boutique real estate development firm founded in 1982 whose portfolio of projects include the Tannery District in Kitchener.

He tells me that only the facade and exterior received a historical designation which allowed the builder to totally gut the inside. while the to

Some of it can be preserved, like the luxurious wood frame doors. Virtually everything else — windows, fixtures, HVAC equipment, you name it — had to be upgraded or replaced.

The developer describes the project as 'old meets new with a Yorkville vibe." The basic appeal is a loft-style of living with its 13-foot ceilings, huge windows and exposed brick, and amenities include a courtyard.

Also of note, two styles are being embraced, classic Victorian in the schoolhouse itself while the townhomes will have a more 'Edwardian' look.

The architectural details are important, because with an infill development like this, it needs to fit the neighbourhood.

"We're in an area where there are already lots of beautiful heritage homes," explains Rick Nethery, director of planning and building services for the Town of Newmarket. "It's such a beautiful building, and we (Town of Newmarket) were hopeful it could be retained."

Then there is the planning aspect. The gutting and renovation may take about a year or so, but the planning — consulting with theTown, local residents, business owners, community organizations, developers and other stakeholders — is a process that takes years.

Fitting a project into a plan is not easy work. Unlike other communities with lots of land to accommodate new home growth, Newmarket is hemmed in, depending on 'infill' and 'intensification' to deal with its rapid growth (expected to be 33,000 residents over the next 30 years.)

To meet its growth needs, Newmarket is using the Yonge and Davis St. corridors for rapid transit and high-density development, while preserving its downtown for a more village-style of living,

As a result, development in the downtown area needs to be approached differently, says Nethery, as it must be "done to a particular scale." Typical high-rise buildings won't fit here and three- and four-storey boutique-style condos and townhomes are the way to go.

Adding to the complexity, Newmarket is also taking steps to improve its downtown, putting in patios and making it more walkable and accessible to bikes.

"We are continuing to examine our development approvals and our zoning by-laws to make the process as smooth and easy as possible." says Nethery.

Put it all together, and it sounds like a lesson in planning and co-operation that could be taught elsewhere. Print: 517,000 impressions E-edition: 360,000 impressions Online: 1,670,000 impressions Tweet: 292,000 followers

DAY TRIPPER

THE MAIN IDEA

Many of Newmarket's highlights can be found on Main Street South. Here are two favourite spots to jump start your food adventure and give you a strong sense of the up-and-coming scene in the town north of Toronto. "Over the last few decades, the former bedroom community...has morphed into a place that wins accolades...but has maintained its charm and romance" Under an hour north of Toronto, the town of Newmarket is making big strides.

What's the vibe?

Over the last few decades, the former bedroom community that was once home to the likes of Jim Carrey and John Candy has morphed into a place that wins accolades for its quaint historic aesthetics, but has maintained its charm and romance. In 2017, it was ranked by Amazon as one of the top 20 most romantic cities in Canada.

Towards an Intelligent Community

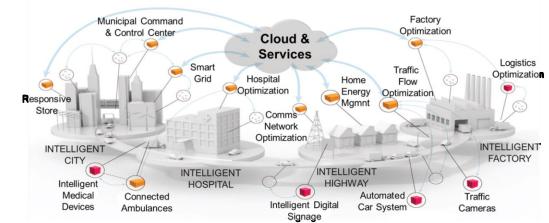

"Smart City projects make communities work better. Intelligent Communities are different. They seek to make better communities where citizens and employers thrive and prosper in the broadband economy. Intelligent Communities adopt technology but do not make it their focus. Instead, they find vision-driven, communitybased, technology smart solutions to solve their most urgent problems."

Newmarket Economic Development Advisory Committee

Why does the Newmarket Economic Development Advisory Committee (NEDAC) exist?

NEDAC ensures strategic support to help the Town achieve community economic development goals by supporting Council in an advisory role.

NEDAC is an advisory body that helps Council advance its Strategic Priorities by providing critical analysis, feedback and advice from a business and community perspective on economic challenges and opportunities.

NEDAC VISION

To accelerate the growth of our community environment where business and people thrive

NEDAC believes...

- change is underway and accelerating efforts speaks to our sense of urgency and intent
- community is Newmarket's strength and recognizes economic development is more than just jobs and taxes
- in creating an environment for success that unleashes the passion, creativity and ingenuity of residents in many settings, including business areas, neighbourhoods and physical environments - e.g., public space, public art, etc.
- Newmarket will thrive, be prosperous, and be successful

Expansion of NEDAC to better reflect the diversity of sectors and stakeholders in the business community
