In its first phase, this partnership would bring together community members and business leaders to identify key opportunities for the community and seek to develop a way forward. Shorefast would examine primary sources and existing local data and would host interviews and workshops to determine potential projects or pilots that would support local economic momentum. This work will include an assessment of potential uses for the former operations centre at 623 Timothy Street to a strong place-based economy.

In the second phase, Shorefast, the Town and participating interested parties would explore and test key pilot projects to determine the feasibility of the specific identified strategies in phase one.

Newmarket to join the Shorefast network.

In addition to the work being done in the local community, Newmarket will be integrated into the national Shorefast network of Canadian communities (Shorenet) and will serve as one of the Institute's founding community partners. As such, Newmarket will be part of Shorenet's founding partner communities with access to the expertise of Shorefast and peer communities across Canada.
